RESEARCH POLICY DOCUMENT

Long-term research lays the groundwork for the institution's future growth.

The institution works to gather, arrange, and interpret data and information related to the research aspects. It also helps the institution take a step back and reflect analytically on the significance and import of those findings as they affect the stability and quality of the institution. The goal of the research policy is to foster a culture of research among the faculty and to develop students' aptitude for it. The policy will act as a general framework for all permitted research activities. In order to further the college's vision and mission, it also seeks to identify research thrust areas with academic, practical, and social relevance. The goal of the research policy is to analyse, comprehend, and effectively address all issues that may arise in the pursuit of high-quality research.

Objectives:

1. To increase institutional capacity for strategic, technical, and operational planning, budgeting, and oversight of all college research activities.
2. To cultivate and advance a research culture among faculty and students

3. To guarantee the excellence, morality, and integrity of research.
4. To promote and make it easier for research works to be published in reputable academic national and international journals, as well as to make it easier for research works to be presented at conferences, workshops, and other academic events.
5. To locate and alert researchers to suitable research opportunities made public by various academic, research, commercial, or governmental organisations.
6. To encourage research that crosses multiple fields of knowledge.
7. To make it easier to offer expert advice, technical support, and suggestions for financial aid.
8. To identify and forge long-term relationships, including MOUs, with domestic and international research organisations in order to broaden the range of research opportunities available to the college's instructors and students.

Requirements for Faculty

1. Research projects should be taken on by all faculty members. They are free to choose the subject of their research, to obtain funding for it from any legitimate source, and to come to their own conclusions. These findings and conclusions ought to be open to peer review and criticism.
